Preface

We Think We can Think...a hypothesis

All is ok with the terms and terminologies of the technical analysis. The basic view I differ with is that, all are dependent on short term history or short term parameters and lot of lagging indicators. All the systems I found work very well with some or the other time, or time frame, but generate lot many number of trade actually required and needed for the well to do trader. Trader here doesn't mean short term trader, my view here is restricted only to gain and remain in profit at the end of certain period. If number of trades increases it is certain that it will make chaos in the mind of trader, hence many time making confusion regarding which system to use at any particular instance. Maximum systems are based on some statistical tools making it rather averaging concept and in that case trader forgets his actual wisdom of the market, since he is addict of mechanical system. And once you are addict of the statistical tool, trader is open for the thousands of different systems to choose. Trader moves from one system to other in case of failure of the first system and he definitely finds 2nd system more appealing and that's why he finds himself in the situation of chaos. After searching for newer and newer system he may come back to his original system after some time. I feel it is a vicious circle of statistical technical analysis. I had been through all these phases for many years and addiction keeps you away from the actual wisdom. Either you call it experience or higher ladder of technical analysis, but to attain this phase you need to go through all the troubles I have gone through. To choose hard way you need first to go through easier ways and find out the lacunas or the problems of the easier side of technical analysis.

It's not only engineering or statistics we need to understand, there are thousands of, rather lakhs of things we are unaware in this world, but first thing and most important thing is that you should be open by heart and mind to accept that we are unaware of maximum things or rather aware of very few things which actually exists or work in this world, while saying this I am not pressurizing it only to the things related to the stock market, because if you stay focused on only one thing or topic you forget the secret sauce which the world is pouring through its own way in every field, so while learning why not become totally nude as far as your heart and mind is concerned. I have gone through so many clues from the universe totally not related to the stock market and they do influence the activities of the stock market. One of the things to mention here, Fibonacci series or Pingala series not only affects stock market as we think, it affects all the living things and that is why it affects the stock market and not the other way round. Similarly there are lot many things which do affect, but initially we should be open in mind to understand and test thoroughly the things which we are taking into consideration for applying to the market. Lets us be open for all topics, sectors, which our intellectual ability can sustain & accept. Why not be open for the topics like biology, chemistry, engineering, astronomy, even history can give us thousands of clues, and give a new outlook to look at market. Narrow mentality will keep us away from most of the wisdom, which can give surprising results in our study. We came in this world without our own knowledge, every this is superimposed on our brain after birth except few biological tools gifted to us or inherited to us through someone whom we don't know, we call it biological chain in scientific language or in spiritual way we can say it's the gift of god. Whatever it may be, I mean to say if we start blank, fresh and in acceptable mode of mentality we are very much prone to change for the newer things which we may come across in future. Let's stay focused on our aim, that is to apply all the knowledge we acquire through n number of fields to the applications in the field of projection or prediction of the stock market. Ameen ....
